The Behavior of Laz Spectators at a Football Game

There was a football match being played at Trabzon before the game started, the Trabzon chief cheerleader explained to the Black Sea coast spectators what they should do in cheering their team. Of course, most of the audience was made up of Black Sea people. He said, "Whenever our team makes a point I shall raise my arms. When you see my arms go up, you should cheer as loudly as you can in order to encourage our team. However, if the other team makes a point, I shall drop my arms to my side. When you see me do that, you should maintain silence."

The game started, and after a while the Trabzon team made a point. The chief cheerleader raised his arms, and the crowd cheered loudly. A short while later the other team made a point, and the cheerleader dropped his arms to his side. Immediately the Black Sea fans jumped up and roared, "Silence! Silence! Silence!"
